and invest it in the stock market. Because that way you not only risk losing money in the market, you also risk losing your house.

Should you borrow against your house to buy stocks?

Fortunately, I was so greedy that I couldn't pass up the free 50% match from my employer, so I signed up despite my stretched finances. It wasn't easy, but boy am I glad that I bit the bullet and put 6% of my salary into my 401k. Those long-ago dollars have grown into a pretty nice chunk of change.

Failure Is Not Defeat

As for me, I know all about failure because I have failed—spectacularly, actually. When I started my career, it was in one of the most coveted spots globally—a proprietary trader at a big global bank. Pretty damn good for a 22-year-old. Heck, very few 32-year-olds could ever land a job like that.
